

NM Health Launches Community Health Worker Online Training

Community Health Worker Core Competency training is for you. Whether you're a seasoned Community Health Worker (CHW), new to the field, or considering a career in community health work, our free CHW Core Competency training is for you.

Successfully completing coursework and specialty training opportunities moves you one step closer toward earning a Certificate of Core Competency Completion and becoming a recognized Community Health Worker. Recipients get connected with health and social systems of care, that contribute to your community's quality of life.

To learn more, find trainings and register for the FREE Competency training, visit NMTRAIN.org and search for CHW.

Community Health Workers are valued members of a highly skilled, competent, relied-upon network of health care delivery teams. They live in the community, know their neighbors, and understand the challenges. CHWs bridge gaps, helping people access health and social service systems.

If you or someone you know may benefit from meeting with a CHW, click here or contact your local Public Health Office.

GET STARTED

You are receiving this message because you consented to receive communications from the New Mexico Department of Health. You can change your preferences or unsubscribe at any time.